INTRODUCTION

This report provides a summary of responses to the PFEW routine arming survey received from respondents in Northumbria.

The PFEW routine arming survey was open between 31st July and 1st September 2017. The survey asked respondents about their experiences and attitudes in the following areas:

- Satisfaction with their current access to armed support
- Views on routine arming
- Views on other protective measures and equipment
- The number of times respondents had felt their life had been threatened at work in the last two years

Where appropriate, details of average responses for the police service as a whole are also presented, differences between the national and local responses have not been tested statistically and therefore any differences reported are for guidance only and must be treated with caution.

RESPONSE RATE AND RESPONDENTS

806 responses were received from respondents in Northumbria. This reflects a response rate of approximately 25%, based on Home Office figures from 2017. This compares to a national response rate of 27% of federated rank members.

The findings presented in this report have a margin of error of 3%. This margin of error has been calculated using the number of responses received from officers in Northumbria compared to the number of officers in the force as a whole. A margin of error of 5% or less is generally considered to be within the normal bounds of academic rigor. If this threshold has not been met, the results from this report must be interpreted more cautiously.

81% of responses from Northumbria were received from male officers and 19% of responses were from female officers. 82% of respondents were Constables, 14% were Sergeants and 4% were Inspectors or Chief Inspectors.

71% of respondents said that they were in a frontline role.

SATISFACTION WITH CURRENT ARMED SUPPORT

Of those respondents who had a view, 59% within Northumbria said that they were either very or fairly satisfied that armed support would be readily available should they require it. In comparison, 41% were either not very or not at all satisfied that armed support would be available.

Nationally, 43% of respondents were either very or fairly satisfied that armed support would be readily available should they require it.
