

Legal Guidance

The legal element of the EAP can assist you with a range of issues that may be on your mind. Here are some examples of when the service may be used for legal concerns. You can call free of charge from a landline to speak with a lawyer and all calls are confidential.

- Your relationship has broken down and you want to get access to your children.
- You want to know how to divide your assets after a divorce.
- You are a tenant and your landlord has notified you that he is selling the property you rent – what are your rights?
- Your teenage son wants to get a tattoo. Does he need your permission?
- You were burgled but your insurance company won't pay out because you left the garage door unlocked. What are your rights?
- Your neighbour has three cars that keep blocking your drive. Can you report him to someone?
- The car you bought second hand turns out to be stolen. What can you do and what are your rights?
- Your teenage daughter is pregnant. She needs advice about her options, state benefits and housing.
- You were involved in a traffic accident that was not your fault. The other driver has threatened legal action. What are your rights?
- Your partner is leaving and wants to take the children too. What should you do next?
- Your neighbour plays loud music late into the night. What can you do?
- You have read your employment contract but there are certain points you don't understand.
